Sogyal Phintso, class IX shares his Fresher's Eve experience...

As a new-comer I had to perform on Fresher's Eve. Thankfully, I was under the guidance of our music teacher who helped me to prepare myself way better than what I thought. Finally the day arrived and being a solo performer, I was all the more nervous. All the hard work that I had put in gave me the confidence to push aside my nervousness and go on stage. I started my song and slowly I could feel the entire audience swaying to my tune! I received a lot of applause for my performance and the day ended on a very happy note.

Samarpita Mahadani, Class VIII shares her experience...

The fresh and proud atmosphere of The Sagar School invited me very warmly. I was very lucky to have got the opportunity to play tabla on this special event.

When I initially faced the audience I was feeling nervous, but as my fingers settled on the tabla, I was enjoying every moment of it. My performance with a huge applause from the audience. My experience of Fresher's Eve was absolutely thrilling!

Astronomy club news

Mr. Ajay Talwar our visiting astronomer writes:

Motions of the Moon

In the months of July and August the student programme consisted of understanding the various motions of our Moon.

Phases

New Moon – When the Moon is between Earth & Sun, and is not visible.

Crescent – The beautiful phase of the Moon when it is lit less than 50%.

First Quarter – One quarter of the Moon's orbit is over, i.e. one week from New Moon and it is exactly 50% illuminated.

Gibbous – This term is less known, and means that the Moon is illuminated more than 50%.

Full Moon – means that Sun, Earth and Moon are in a straight line, the Moon is fully illuminated and will be visible all night.

Perigee & Apogee

Perigee – When the Moon comes closest to the Earth in its elliptical orbit (in a month), the point is called Perigee. Moon appears the biggest at this point.

Apogee – When the Moon moves farthest from the Earth in its orbit, the point is called Apogee. Moon appears the smallest at this point. The size of Moon can vary approximately 10% at Perigee and Apogee.

CELESTIAL GLORY

Synchronous Motion

The rotation and revolution of the Moon around the Earth is synchronised, that is why we see only one side of the Moon. We can see the “near side” but not the “far side”. Incidentally there is no “dark side” of the Moon. The Moon receives sunlight during a month.

Liberation

The Moon also wobbles east-west as well as north-south, while moving in its orbit. The wobbling of the moon is not very prominent, but if you keep a lookout for the prominent crater Tyco, the distance of this crater varies from the edge of the Moon. Due to liberation we can see 59% of the surface of the Moon over a period of time.

Here is an image of the Moon which was shot by the students of Astronomy Club, using an iPhone, hand held against the observatory telescope. Tyco crater can be seen prominently at the bottom of the image.

Aastha Singh, class X writes.....

It was nice to be a part of the 14th Kusum Verma Memorial National English Competition. We interacted with a number of students from different schools and witnessed many performances. The theatre workshop happened to be great food for knowledge. We learnt much about the Shakespearean era and the audience the bard wrote for. Though we didn't manage a win, yet it was a great learning experience.

REVISITING SHAKESPEARE

Gaurav K.C., class XI writes.....

It broke our stereotypical thoughts on Shakespeare. We were introduced to the real Shakespearean era.

Those we have by far seen in the movies, now seems far from what the reality was then. The theatre workshop had such an effect. I was called on stage with another boy from a different school and we acted as bulls. Mr. Dheesh is a well-known theatre person and his class instigated a love for theatre within me. We also heard a number of stories which were read out by the contestants and that honed our creative skills.

Doon School Model United Nations - August 12 to 14

A group of seven students attended The Doon School Model United Nations Conference (DSMUN). It was a three days conference that commenced on 12th August and the closing ceremony was on 14th. DSMUN had 13 committees this year and our students participated in Human Resource Council, Disarmament and International Security Committee, African Union, Indian Parliament and Special political and decolonisation committee.

Ephraim Chishi, class XII shares...

DSMUN 2016 was a real eye-opener. Observing so many students from different schools gave me a perspective of how they have gathered from various places to be at that one event. Never did I expect such competition or passion in the conference; after all we are just students I thought. I'm glad to say that DSMUN' 16 has absolutely shattered that belief, everyone at the event; staff, students and competitors showed me that nothing is too small to stand up for.

Something about the DSMUN seemed to make time want to slow down and truly savour everything that was going on, every debate and speech. The knowledge that I gained there will be cherished throughout my life.

The day I accepted my teacher's offer for the DSMUN was a good day indeed, I shudder to think that I would missed such an enthralling time had I turned it down.

LEARNING EXPERIENCES @ SEMINARS AND WORKSHOPS

Teachers' Workshop - July 7 to 9

The school was yet to get back to its former swing but the teachers were busy modifying their strategies for the coming session. A multilingual philanthropist and above all a teacher, Mrs. Tara Sekhri emphasised on the humanization of the education system focusing on using gestures and dramatization. The following day the workshop was taken up by Mrs. Komal Sood, an educator with quite a lot of establishments in her life from being a Principal to Director of Curriculum and training, Vidyagyan schools. She introduced the workshop with the concept of 'Differentiation in Education'.

The final day of the workshop was taken up by Lt. Col. S.P Sharma, the Dean of Pastoral Care. He taught us a valuable lesson, that, often we become so worked up to win alone that we do not even bother to think of a win -win situation where there would be more of we than me.

TEAM WORK PAYS...

DIFFERENTIATION IN EDUCATION

Shatarupa Mahadani, Maths faculty, shares...

It was an informative workshop to re-orient our strategies for 'Making teaching Effective, Interactive and Responsive' for 'Diverse Learners.' 'Extra mile that you work will bring you success' and 'Bringing up children without comparison is true education' are two essential keys for the teachers acting as facilitators aiming at the students' perfection and mastery on the subjects. The knowledge would surely be beneficial to us in the long run.

Silver medallist Muskan Sarada, class VII (Commonwealth Essay Competition, 2016)

'Incredible India' I truly believe in this phrase, as it best describes my country's rich heritage, tradition, food, majestic land forms, languages, attire etc.

During my winter vacations, I had gone to the airport to receive my friend Biraaja, who was visiting me from Manipur for her holidays.

While waiting I saw a foreigner jostling with 2 big bags, I went and helped her out and it felt really good. Then she introduced herself to me. I came to know that she was an Australian and her name was Megan and I even came to know that she was also going to Sikkim for her holidays. Then I introduced myself to her and invited her to my place and even asked her to join me and my friend Biraaja at my home in Gangtok.

We then travelled from the airport to Gangtok for around 4 hours. And by the time we reached it was 12 noon and she was really surprised and excited to explore the different things and places.

First when she entered my house we offered her khada (a traditional cloth given to a person with respect) and had put tikka and chawal on her head to welcome her. My mom then served her food. We ate momos and shaifale (traditional food) followed by a glass of local black tea. She was actually very happy to see that food being cooked in front of her and even wanted to make a piece of momos but couldn't do it, as it turned gooey while steaming it. Then I took her to guest room and told her to freshen up so that we could go out for evening walk. Even I went to my room and took a power nap; freshened up and took her for evening walk. While we were in the park, she was very busy with my friend's dog and it was a local Apso dog so this way I even came to know that she was an animal lover. Then we went back, ate our dinner and went to bed early, because, next morning we were going to watch the morning sunrise.

As the sun shone bright and sunny in the morning we walked out of my house, for a walk and for the sunrise.

We watched the sunrise and ate our breakfast in a nearby restaurant. We ate local omelette and bread followed by a glass of milk for a healthy day. After our breakfast we changed and our next adventure was a helicopter ride! It was around 2 hours' drive to the helipad and there arrived our moment! We boarded a noisy red helicopter and our hearts started beating really fast. And slowly and slowly our heart started beating faster and faster as the helicopter was leaving the land slowly and slowly and we flew up on the air and it was an unforgettable ride. Later we went to Enchey monastery and on the way we saw the Sikkim organic food factory. So I felt we should go and have a look, and this way I could also meet my friend who was the head of juice department. We first went and saw the delicious juices, being made and it was really fun looking at that as we could see the oranges being peeled and squeezed out. Afterwards we visited the pickle section and over there we tasted the local chilli and different types of other vegetables being pickled. Then after we saw the jam section and it was also very fun because we could see the fruits turn into jelly like jam due to a substance known as gelatine. There after we reached the Enchey monastery. There we first entered through a big gate. And the monastery was full of monks (traditionally called lama). They were wearing a red, saffron coloured cloth on their body. I even told her about the history of the monastery, including the meaning of the sacred writing, {OM MANE PADME OM}. Then we reached around 6:00pm in the evening and then visited the market M. G. Marg. There we went to many shops and Megan even brought a traditional jewellery for herself, we even visited the local tea shop and drank the first harvest tea (the first grown tea of the year) and she even bought a packet of local Temi tea for herself followed by a dragon designed tea set. We even visited many local food courts and the best item Megan liked was aloo chura, she liked it so much that she ate aloo chura at around three places. We then went back to my house and slept as we were going to my village tomorrow.

We woke up at around 7:00am in the morning and left around 8:15am. When we reached Megan was very surprised to see the greenery around and then I told her that in village area it is normally very green and anyways Sikkim is known as the most organic and clean state because of its rich flora. We entered my house and my nani (grandmother) welcomed her and after seeing my farm which had around 5 mango and orange trees including many vegetables and animals. We then went to the village school where Megan taught for around the half day and even served food to children. We went back after the school and then I introduced some of my cousins to her and this is how we spent the entire day. Next morning we woke up early as Megan was leaving and my nani gifted her a pair of bhakhu (traditional dress). She was there with us for around 3 nights and 4 days and today evening she had her flight so we had to travel back to the airport and as everything comes to an end so this day came but couldn't help it. She waved her hands to me saying that she was very delighted to see India and very inspired to help the underprivileged so she will definitely come back with her team to help them. After her departure, I was missing her words and voice. India follows a true tradition... come as a friend or tourist and leave as a member of family and now I would like to conclude my essay by saying I am proud to be an Indian and you should also be.
