

for Chanel

SHE was announced as the new face of Chanel's iconic No. 5 perfume last year. And now Gisele Bündchen is unveiling her rarely-seen musical side in two new videos by the designer.

The 35-year-old catwalk queen turned songbird as she sang a dreamy tune while strumming an acoustic guitar for the peaceful Chanel videos. Gisele took viewers inside her world as she strolled barefoot beside her gorgeous cabin-style East Coast home.

The model looked at peace with herself as she wrapped up in a light-weight cream blanket. Gisele then giggled after she strummed her guitar while singing a dreamy tune.

Gisele then explained the power of perfume, and how scent had the ability to transport her to decades prior. "You know when someone wears a fragrance, and then 20 years later you're like someplace else and someone passes along and they're wearing the same fragrance?" The model reflected. "And you have the memory of 20 years before from that person, just because of the smell," she added.

Gisele then recalled her mother's signature fragrance, and how she hoped her own perfume would leave a lasting impact on her own two children. "I remember my mom's perfume, I remember her scents. I hope that my kids remember my perfume, maybe a mom's scent is not something you can forget, right?" She said.

In a second video, Gisele recalled her childhood in Brazil, where she spent time on her grandparent's farm. "I feel very connected to the earth since I was a little girl, because I grew up in a small village in the south of Brazil. I was always barefeet, and my grandparents on my mom's side were farmers," she explained.

Gisele also explained how her early morning rituals kept her centered. "There are things that I feel are very supportive for me, liked meditation or yoga. If I don't take that moment for myself to wake up before my kids wake up, when everything is quiet and peaceful, sit with myself and just be in that state where it's complete like, everything is calm and silence," she said.

Adding: "I'm able to ground and really feel present in my body, so for me meditation and yoga have been unbelievable tools."

Just last year Gisele was unveiled as the latest face of Chanel's N. 5 perfume. The model landed the gig for her "natural beauty and modern femininity", a Chanel spokesperson said, according to WWD.

Gisele shares daughter Vivian - who turned three last weekend - and son Benjamin, who turned six on Tuesday, with her husband of six years, Tom Brady.

Daily Mail

MAIL TODAY promotional feature

The Sagar School celebrates its founder's day

The founder's day of The Sagar School was celebrated with gusto and enthusiasm. Annurag Batra, the chairman and editor-in-chief of Businessworld and exchange4media group, was the chief guest on this occasion and commended the school for being iconic and praised the founder, Late Dr. Vidya Sagar, for creating an 'oasis in a desert'.

Also present was the chairperson of the institution, Rosemary Sagar, who emphasised on the need of developing in children curiosity, independence and belief in self and how The Sagar School through its equilibrium between academics, sports and co-curricular activities was committed in nurturing its students in this direction. The director, Sharmistha Julka, spoke on how every individual is unique in his talents and how education at the school was an exploration and discovery of self. SMC members, principals and students of neighbouring schools and parents were present in overwhelming numbers. The chief guest gave away prizes and congratulated the CBSE toppers.

The principal, Jayshree Balasaria gave the welcome speech and presented the annual report. The cultural programme revolved around the theme of 'We are the World' with very strong message of unity and peace and included musical concert, plays, fusion dances and a doll show.

The vote of thanks was given by the vice principal, Dr. Deepak Raj Singh Bisht.

A CHRISTIAN cult leader and psychotherapist who breastfed her clients by telling them to suckle "mummy's milk" has been jailed for a series of bizarre sexual assaults on women. Vanessa Clark, 63, manipulated her clients into paying thousands of pounds for "skin to skin" contact - including breastfeeding - which she claimed had been approved by a priest to heal depression.

The court heard Clark massaged one victim until she became aroused before telling her this was her "inner baby" coming out. Another vulnerable client, who began shaking as she spoke about her childhood, was asked by Clark: "Does baby want some milk?"

Clark has now been jailed for four years after "wholly abusing" her position of trust as a psychotherapist. The court heard how the former cult leader - who had been recommended to her victims by fellow Christians - admitted carrying out the abuse to feed her "sadistic desires".

Cult leader in jail for breastfeeding clients

In a confession letter written to her female partner, Clark said: "I would breastfeed my clients and on one occasion took off my top and told her it was a special thing I would do only for her. It was entirely deceptive and manipulative. I subjected her to my sadistic desires."

Manipulated clients into having 'skin on skin' contact

Prosecutor Henry James told Oxford Crown Court that the "unusual and troubling" offences took place between 1996 and 2001 because Clark wanted to wield "power" over her victims.

Clark had been recommended to her two victims by fellow Christians and invited them back to a flat in London to perform her "therapy". One of the victims, who had been struggling to come to terms with abuse during her childhood, began having "intense and personal sessions" with Clark, during which the abuse took place.

Clark's offending came to light when her partner contacted one of the victims. She said she had become frightened of Clark's conversational references to rape, murder and torture. Daily Mail

Just last year Gisele was unveiled as the latest face of Chanel's N. 5 perfume